How Your Girl Will Benefit

Build Confidence and Personal Power

Girls gain confidence when they accomplish challenges, lead projects, and try new things they may have never been exposed to otherwise, while knowing they have a safe space to take risks. A structured, supportive troop helps girls trust themselves, take initiative, and feel proud of who they are.

The girls will be exposed to the Arts, Culture, Science, and Community Service

Troops give girls opportunities to:

- Create art, music, pod cast, or theatre projects
- Learn about different cultures, languages, and traditions
- Learn about science and STEM through fun experiments like making lip gloss and fragrance
- Give back to the community through volunteering or service projects. Girls learn gratitude when helping others

These experiences spark curiosity, creativity, and a lifelong love of learning.

Develop Leadership, Teamwork, and Life Skills

Troop Leaders are encouraged to allow girls to practice leadership by planning activities, presenting ideas, or taking responsibility for troop projects. Teamwork exercises and collaborative tasks help them develop communication, cooperation, and problem-solving skills that will benefit them in school and beyond. And will help them learn to ask for help if needed.

Real-World Confidence

- Yes, girls have fun, but they also learn to handle challenges, speak up for themselves, and make decisions independently. This is what will cause her to make the right decisions for her.

Safe Risk-Taking

- Passport Girls gives her a space to try new things safely, like leading a project, speaking in front of a group, or experimenting with arts and science. Parents love this because she learns how to fail, adapt, and succeed in a supported environment.

Friendships With Depth

- This isn't just "playdate friends." She'll build meaningful relationships with peers who share her values. Girls in her troop support each other, celebrate differences, and learn empathy, creating bonds that last beyond meetings.

Mentorship That Matters

- Troop leaders aren't just supervising — they model respect, responsibility, and integrity. Girls watch, learn, and emulate real-world leadership — a form of mentorship that goes beyond school or sports.

A Place Where She Can Be who she is

Passport Girls is a launchpad for her dreams, her confidence, and her unique potential. Here, your daughter isn't just participating in activities, she's discovering who she is, what she's capable of, and how she can make a difference.

She'll try new things safely, take small risks that teach resilience, and learn her personal talents that may surprise even you. She'll form friendships with girls who lift each other up, celebrate differences, and support each other in real ways. She'll be guided by leaders who model integrity, encouragement, and empowerment, showing her that respect, responsibility, and creativity go hand-in-hand with fun.

Parents often tell us that their daughters come home proud, inspired, and eager to share what they've learned, and that the growth they see is deeper than any trophy or badge. It's a kind of confidence that lasts, skills that translate to school and life, and memories that create strong, capable young women ready to take on the world.

Passport Girls isn't just something she does, it's a place where she becomes the girl she's meant to be.
